Dear Sirs,

Please allow this letter to serve as notice that one of your yahoo users has committed a criminal act using his yahoo.com email account: [REDACTED]@yahoo.com.

He stole our corporate laptop today and when he was apprehended by the WV State Police he had deleted four month's worth of corporate intellectual property – everything that had been put on the laptop since I had purchased it at the end of January 2015.

As Chairman of the National Alliance, this individual, Randolph L. Dilloway, was my employee, and by deleting our proprietary information he was not only breaching an employment agreement – a civil matter – he also admitted in another agreement I had him sign today in front of WV State Police in exchange for severance, that he deleted our proprietary intellectual property with “criminal intent.”

I am hoping Yahoo will shut down Dilloway's account immediately, denying him access to any data he may have sent to his yahoo email account as files or attachments or to his Yahoo briefcase option.

Please contact me for any information you might want for further clarification.

Sincerely,

William W Williams, Chairman
National Alliance
